Verdict in farmer's slurry pool death

A coroner's court in County Down has delivered a verdict of accidental death in respect of a 43-year old farmer who drowned in a 2-metre deep slurry pit on his farm in Dromore last June. He was working alone in a shed above the pit, an HSENI inspector noted the presence of slurry gas but judged that the farmer probably slipped rather than being overcome by fumes, the opening to the tank had become slightly obscured by slurry foam. 16th January 2013

Confined space accident at refinery

Two workers died yesterday in a confined space accident at the Paz Oil refinery in Ashdod, 20 miles south of Tel Aviv. It is thought that the workers were engaged in maintenance work and may have been attempting to fix a leak, initial speculation of the accident by the company pointed to a valve having been opened prior to the closing of another, with the workers then inhaling poisonous gas. 27th January 2013
